

As the holiday driving season approaches, and at a time when national transportation infrastructure policy is up for revision and improvement, policy makers must take a fresh look at transportation.

The new report “Taking the Wheel: Achieving a Competitive Transportation Sector Through Mobility Choice,” details the impact of 10 specific policies that would level the playing field among transportation options.

The report’s recommendations aim to reduce the ability of an oil price spike to disrupt our economy, decrease wasteful government spending and open the door to economical and convenient transportation options.
